

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A method for routing conductors in an integrated circuit design is disclosed, including the steps of determining the number of sensitive conductors requiring 5 placement into quiet track locations, wherein a quiet track location is defined as any track location immediately adjacent to a stable conductor, determining the number of quiet track locations available in said integrated circuit design, and routing one or more sensitive conductors into one or more quiet track locations.